Ipeople Promotes Chris Loupe

to

Director of Human Resources

Lewisville, TX, - Feb. 15, 2016 - Interface People, LP (Ipeople), a leading healthcare data integration company, announced today that Chris Loupe has been promoted to Director of Human Resources. Since joining Ipeople in 2005, Loupe has served in several roles, including Project Management and Manager of HR. During his time as HR Manager, Loupe has expanded his expertise in the field of HR.

In this role, Chris will partner Ipeople Executive Team to implement Lean Center of Excellence principles. As Ipeople continues to grow, the company has elected to build product teams to focus on areas of expertise to meet specific healthcare administrators' needs: Data Access, Data Discovery, Data Continuity, Data Migration and Data Exchange. In addition to the number one role of Ipeople which is to improve patient care through information technology, Ipeople continues to be experts in the (HCIS) arena specializing in MEDITECH and beyond.

“Chris has been an important part of Ipeople’s success over the past ten years, and as we incorporate Lean values, I look forward to seeing the HR department become a true partner of our product teams, helping them succeed,” said Gary Armfield, co-founder of Ipeople. “HR’s focus will be to recruit the right people to join our organization through partnering with management and product teams, helping to build a Lean Center of Excellence, monitoring the employees’ pulse and continuous employee education and training.”

In addition to Loupe’s new role as Director of Human Resources, he has been invited to participate in Ipeople’s executive team to contribute his unique expertise. Prior to joining Ipeople, Loupe obtained a Master’s Degree in Business Administration and held the position of Telecommunications Technical Operations supporting a call center for over 7 years.
